ROUSING OVATION AT FIRST DEMOCRATIC RALLY OF STATE CANDIDATES IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Oct. 7.—Greeted with a rousing ovation as he entered the hall, held speechless for several minutes when he advanced to the front of the platform to deliver his address, his speech punctuated throughout with spontaneous and hearty cheers that seemed to come from almost every throat in the hall, Judge Simeon E. Baldwin, democratic candidate for governor, made his first public appearance as candidate for that office in a genuinely old-fashioned, enthusiastic rally of that party in Music hall last evening. The hall was well filled with an appreciative and interested audience that took up most of the seats on the first floor, stood in the rear and filled the galleries when the candidates ascended the stage and Chairman Doughton of the Democratic town committee introduced former Mayor James B. Martin as the presiding officer of the meeting.

Ovation for Baldwin.
Ex-Mayor Martin was greeted with ringing applause as he spoke of the auspicious prospects before the party at the opening of this campaign and an outburst of approval followed his remarks that every indication pointed to this as a Democratic year. He then introduced Judge Baldwin and as the candidate stepped forward an outburst that filled the hall and was sustained for some time, diminished a little and then redoubled, came from the hall and did not die away until after three rousing cheers had been responded to, almost the entire audience rising to give them.

Utilities Bill Meets Favor.
Judge Baldwin first set forth as a leading proposition that there was a general feeling among the people that things have not been going right and that the Republican party was responsible for it. He then went into a discussion of the four needs in the line of legislation in this state as he looked at it, a corrupt practices act which he said the people wanted to put an end forever to this odor of corruption which has come to surround the larger Republican nominations of every kind, a public utilities commission, declaring "I share the common opinion of the people that some kind of a public utilities commission must be created and that we want the best kind, which statement brought a round of applause from the house, the enactment of an employers' liability act which would be a real act and the abolishment of the $5,000 death liability limit.

He declared the Republicans had had every opportunity to pass these measures and did not do it, and he characterized the Republican party as a party of professors and not of performers.

Has Fun With Chandler.
One of the features of Judge Baldwin's address which carried the public with him strongly was his reply to Representative Chandler of Rocky Hill. He ridiculed in a dignified manner the latter's objections to himself which had been set forth in his Torrington speech and when he had given the house several good laughs and turned away to the more serious part of his address cheers and cries of "Go on with him," rose from the hall.

Judge Baldwin then went on to say that there was one question to which the American people are giving particular attention this year, that is whether they can trust the Republican party in power any longer, and that depended on the question, "Has the Republican party kept its word?" He went into a discussion of the rise in prices and of the coincidence that where there is a high tariff on goods there is a combination or trust dealing in that line of goods and declaring that cutting off foreign competition resulted in trusts to dispose of home competition. So far as tariff was for the real protection of American wage earners allowing for the real difference in wages plus a fair profit he said all Americans were agreed on that but when it came to giving many times this profit it was wrong.

Republicans Cannot Revise.
Judge Baldwin occasioned considerable applause when he declared that the Republicans really could not revise the tariff downward as the hog had grown too large for around the trough. There is only one party, he declared, that could reduce the tariff, the party that has always maintained that a low tariff is the right one.

Just before his conclusion Judge Baldwin spoke earnestly of the usurpation of constitutional powers and powers of the states by the federal government and insisted that Connecticut was especially interested in maintaining the principle that no unconstitutional change or increase in the power of the federal government could come except by constitutional amendment.

Baldwin Sacrifices Self.
In concluding Judge Baldwin made a strong hit when he begged that the voters send a solid Democratic delegation to congress, as that was the crucial place, regardless of what they did about the governorship. He said: "The place to put on the brakes is in congress. We are electing five congressmen this year. Let us elect men who are on this point, for the true interests of the nation and of the states alike. Vote as you please for governor. Governors have little influence in Washington. But vote for the Democratic congressmen and let us have a solid delegation to proclaim again on the floor of the house, the true sound, eternal principles of Democratic doctrine."

Mayor T. L. Reilly.
Introduced as the best man for Meriden ever had, Mayor Thomas L. Reilly of that city, spoke next. He also received a strong demonstration, and was frequently applauded in the course of his remarks. He declared the happiness and welfare of the people of this district depended especially in his opinion on the prosperity of the manufactures of the district, and he believed those would be best served by the party that had the welfare of all the people at heart rather than of a favored few.

Defines a Democrat.
Sarcastic Republicans, he declared, used to ask, "What is a Democrat?" They are not asking that so much of late. If they do, however, we have an answer ready for them: "He is the man who believes in the principles of government for which Judge Baldwin, Woodrow Wilson and John A. Dix stand. He is a man who believes that this government was made for all the people, not for a select few."

The Republican bosses or leaders, you could take whichever term you wished, have come to regard the government as personal property and consider it impudence for any party to question it. But the day of reckoning is at hand, and an account of their stewardship must be given and it will not be an accounting by a paid accountant, but by the common voters who have been misled, betrayed and forsaken. He declared he did not wish to array the masses against the classes, but stood for each receiving just what he earned and deserved and no more.

Declining Republicanism.
Mayor Reilly made quite a hit when he referred to these as the days of declining Republicanism and went on to speak of allegations of corruption in connection with the nominations of the Republican party. Personally he said he had no fault to find that the Republicans did not have a direct primary system as he might have had to face a man who could not only run around the end but also back the line hard and who would stand at least an equal show in making a congressional touchdown. Declaring he declared, were the correct thing, however, and a man who could not get a nomination in a direct primary did not deserve one from any source.

He then spoke in favor of direct election of senators, thus avoiding the disgrace of a Lorimer case, investigation into Panama expenditures, whose money besides Harriman went to elect a president in 1904, a graduated income tax he declared was the best tax ever imposed, revision of the "Dingle" tariff, publicity of campaign funds and declared he was proud of the Democratic party because it stood for these things and because it had no broken promises behind it. Concluding, he said the party would succeed because it had chosen "the Baldwins, Wilsons, Dixes, Gaynors and Harmons to lead us out of the Republican wilderness, through the dead sea of Republican promises into the promised land of equality and equal justice for all."

Russell Hits Corruption.
Talcott H. Russell, candidate for attorney-general, spoke briefly, confining himself chiefly to the charges of corruption which were in the air. Sheriff Philip Hugo and Democratic State Secretary Edwin S. Thomas, candidate for judge of probate were the other speakers.

The Historic City of Delhi, Delhi is the most historic city in all India. It may not be the oldest, although it lays claim to a respectable middle age, dating from 1000 B. C. At that time the master of Delhi called himself emperor of all the world, and emperors, at least of India, have ruled there almost ever since. Old Delhi, without the walls, is a city of picturesque ruins. Imperial Delhi, the modern city, was created by Shah Jehan, a contemporary of Queen Elizabeth. From the date of the first Mohammedan incursion, A. D. 715, perpetual warfare raged round Delhi until at length she yielded to the irresistible power of the Moguls. The city was alternately Mohammedan and Hindu during a great many years and finally, in 1803, was made British by General Lake. Delhi has the finest and largest mosque in India. It took 5,000 men six years to build it. The noble tomb of the Emperor Humayun marks the change of creed which followed the Moslem invasion, while the observatory of Jai Singh and the deserted hall of the seventy columns recall the short triumph of Brahmanism.

She Couldn't Fool Him.
"You have a splendid figure," said the tailor. "I shall have no trouble in giving you an excellent fit."
Feeling fairly well satisfied, the man went to a shoe store.
"Your feet are splendidly shaped and rather small for a man of your size, too," said the clerk. "These shoes are just what you ought to have."
He took them and bought a hat at the hatter's, where he was told that he had such a finely shaped head and such splendid features that the hat which he tried on first was just what he needed to make him look his best.
Then he passed into a large department store and, finding the glove counter sat down where a pretty young woman was waiting to serve him.
"Just place your elbow on the counter, please," she said. "What a finely shaped hand you have! Let me—"
"Wait!" he commanded. "By George, you can't put that over on me! I used to be the catcher on a baseball team."
—Buffalo News.

Could Not Deny It.
"I will ask you," said the lawyer, who was trying to throw doubts on the testimony of a witness, "if you have ever been indicted for any offense against the law?"
"I never have, sir."
"Have you ever been arrested on a charge of any kind?"
"Never."
"Well, have you ever been suspected of committing a crime?"
"I'd rather not answer that question."
"Hail! You would rather not. I thought so. I insist upon your answering it. Have you ever been suspected of crime?"
"Yes, sir; often. Every time I come home from a trip abroad the customs inspectors at New York city suspect me of being a smuggler."
—Chicago Tribune.

The Devil of the Desert.
It is not generally known how a devil rides a camel, but Mr. Hans Vichac acquired the information and imparts it in his volume, "Through the Sahara." One night a camel suddenly ran amuck. Other camels followed suit and a general panic ensued. "The frightened yells of my escort told me that a ghoul, a wicked demon of the desert, had seized the camel. I was told how these evil spirits sometimes took a fancy to mount a camel; the camel would then look to see who was digging it in the ribs, and, perceiving no one, would grip its heart, for then it knew that the devil was on its back."

Malleable Glass of the Egyptians.
Strabo and Josephus both affirm that the Egyptian glass workers were so well skilled in their art that they imitated the amethyst and other precious stones to perfection. Malleable glass was one of the secret arts of the ancients, the formula for making it being now reckoned as lost. Strabo mentions a clay of glass which could be hammered into any desired shape, the material of which it was composed being as ductile as lead.

How Plants Remain Upright.
If a flowerpot is laid on its side the stalk of the plant growing in it gradually curves upward until it resumes the vertical position. This is called geotropic curvature, and the question is by what means the plant is stimulated to change its direction of growth. One theory asserts that movable starch grains in the plant cells fall to the lower side as the position is changed and by their pressure influence the mechanism of growth.

His World.
Pretty Girl (to Charles, her betrothed)—Charles, how far is it around the world? Isn't it 24,000?"
Charles (putting both arms around her)—That's all a mistake, love. It is only about twenty-four inches."

A Legal View.
"The Bible says that no man can serve two masters."
"Yes. That's probably the first law against bigamy ever put down."
—Cleveland Leader.

Curious.
Isn't it curious that when it is one minute after 8 o'clock it is past 8, when it is thirty minutes after it is only half past 8?

Be brief, for it is with words as with sunbeams—the more they are condensed the deeper they burn.—Southey.

"IT BEATS ALL"
This is quoted from a letter of M. Stockwell, Hannibal, Mo. "I recently used Foley's Honey and Tar for the first time. To say I am pleased does not half express my feelings. It beats all the remedies I ever used. I contracted a bad cold and was threatened with pneumonia. The first dose gave great relief and one bottle completely cured me. Contains no opiates. F. B.
